

DR. GEORGE W. COX
Interim President
1990-1991

George W. Cox, Ed. D., served Tennessee State University for more than 20 years, progressing during his tenure from professor of education to vice president for academic affairs, and interim president from July 1990 to April 1991. He was a distinguished member of several organizations, and received numerous citations for his work in education, human relations and public service. He earned degrees from LeMoyne-Owen College, Memphis State University and the University of Tennessee.